This evocative track dives deep into the realm of space travel dreams and personal evolution, blending captivating guitar riffs with introspective lyrics. The band's penchant for meaningful storytelling—often through imaginative cat-influenced lore—soars to new heights in "I'm Projection." The result is a cosmic journey that both challenges and entralls listeners, encouraging them to explore their own potential for transformation.

Background and Context

Artist/Band Bio: Darwin's Cat came to life during the global COVID era when Alice and Oleh Lafox decided to channel lockdown energy into creating an art-rock band with a distinctive sound and narrative. The duo is known for weaving stories about an interplanetary civilization of cats—a creative lens through which they shine a light on modern human issues, world history, and the possible future of humanity. Their music is at once melodic and cerebral, hooking audiences with memorable riffs while prompting reflection on humanity's place in the cosmos.

Song Story: "I'm Projection" began as a simple yet addictive guitar melody that Alice and Oleh stumbled upon during their travels in Scandinavia. Enthrilled by the tune, they recorded it immediately while on the road in their RV, capturing the raw, magical essence of the moment. After returning home, the pair spent nearly half a year trying to refine the song—only to realize that the first take was the most powerful version they had. This led to the final release retaining much of the spontaneous, magnetic feel that first drew them in.

Production Details: Most of “I’m Projection” was recorded on the move, inside an RV traversing Scandinavian highways. The mobile environment, combined with the breathtaking landscapes, imbued the track with an unfiltered sense of wonder and discovery. The band then fine-tuned the track back home, ensuring it retained the enchanting energy of its original recording session.

Notable Highlights Quote

A pivotal lyrical moment in “I’m Projection” comes from its central theme about how genes and environment shape any living being. Oleh Lafox succinctly captures this in a line from the track:

“Genes are blueprint of me, context is plan for mind. I’m a projection, when the world and genes combined.”

Speaking about the song’s universal meaning, Oleh adds, “This song is truly for any living creature in the universe. Everybody is shaped by their genes to fit into their environment, and that journey of self-improvement is something we all share.”

Listeners can expect a thought-provoking journey in “I’m Projection.” From the playful mention of building a spaceship to explore Mars to the deeper philosophical take on free will and self-transformation, the track is a testament to Darwin’s Cat’s innovative approach. “I’m Projection” harnesses powerful, melodic hooks while daring to ask questions about humanity’s endless potential.

Whether you’re drawn in by art-rock ambiance, attracted to stories of interplanetary felines, or simply seeking a fresh perspective on self-discovery, Darwin’s Cat’s latest single promises to open minds and shift perspectives.

Verse 1

Genes are blueprint of me
Context is plan for mind
I'm a projection
When the world and genes combined.
I can change myself
By controlling input stream.
Chaotic information
Leads to brain from cream

Chorus

I would like to construct a spaceship to visit Mars
To visit ancient Mars
 and visit the nearest stars
For this I should first
 reconstruct myself
I must organize my mind
 like knowledge on a bookshelf.

To visit other planets
 I need strong legs and arms.
Plus a heat-resistant body,
 Plus replacements for my lungs.
I need a strong power source,
 not organic food.
I need a set of sensors,
 plus X-ray vision aptitude.

Verse 2

I'm the information collected by genes pool
My genes build my brain
It's genes's defensive tool
Brain is so complex thing
That he got its own free will
It's can be chance of freedom
Or chance to make self kill

Chorus

I would like to construct
 a spaceship to visit Mars
To visit ancient Mars
 and visit the nearest stars
For this I should first
 reconstruct myself
I must organize my mind
 like knowledge on a bookshelf.
